Richmond was selected yesterday by the executive committee of the American Gas Institute in session at New York, as the 1912 convention city. The decision was reached after apprited ballioning in competition with a number of other cities that put in bids for the meeting.

The meeting of the executive committee was attended by Business Manager W. T. Dabney, of the Chamber of Commerce, who left for New York Wednesday hearing Richmond's invitation He made a short address to the committee, setting forth the advantage of the city as a convention point.

The convention will meet next Octobers and will be ring to Richmond between 650 and 700 gas experts from the municipal and privately-owned plants of the country. It will be in session several days. The meeting always attracts a large number of supply houses and the appliance and machinery exhibits of these are always a big feature.
